The Conversation Frame

Forms and Functions of Fictive Interaction

Edited by

Esther Pascual
Sergeiy Sandler

University of Groningen

[Under review]

John Benjamins Publishing Company

Amsterdam / Philadelphia
Table of contents

List of contributors ........................................................................................... v
Acknowledgements ............................................................................................ vi

Part I: Introduction

Chapter 1. Fictive interaction and the conversation frame: An overview
Esther Pascual and Sergei Sandler ........................................................................ 3

Chapter 2. Fictive interaction and the nature of linguistic meaning
Sergei Sandler ........................................................................................................ 43

Part II: Fictive interaction as cognitive reality

Chapter 3. Generic integration templates for fictive communication
Cristóbal Pagán Cánovas and Mark Turner .......................................................... 81

Chapter 4. Real, imaginary, or fictive? Philosophical dialogues in an early Daoist text and its pictorial version
Mingjian Xiang ...................................................................................................... 117

Chapter 5. Silent abstractions versus “Look at me” drawings: Corpus evidence that artworks’ subject matter affects their fictive speech
Karen Sullivan ...................................................................................................... 165

Part III: Fictive interaction as discourse structure

Chapter 6. Persuading and arguing with the reader: Fictive interaction as discourse organizing device in witchcraft pamphlet prefaces (1566–1621)
Krisda Chaemsaiithong ......................................................................................... 217

Chapter 7. Invocation or apostrophe?: Rhetorical dimensions of prayer idioms in broadcast television
William FitzGerald and Todd Oakley ................................................................... 257

Chapter 8. On discourse-motivated ‘sorry’s’: Fictive apologies in different languages
Gusztav Demeter ................................................................................................. 301
Part IV: Fictive interaction as linguistic construction

Chapter 9. What about? Fictive question-answer pairs for non-information-seeking functions across signed languages ..........345
   Maria Josep Jarque

Chapter 10. Fictive questions in conditionals? Synchronic and diachronic evidence from German and English ...................... 389
   Torsten Leuschner

Chapter 11. Intonation of fictive vs. actual reported speech in a Brazilian Portuguese oral corpus ....................................... 433
   Luiz Fernando Matos Rocha and Pablo Arantes

Chapter 12. Polish nominal constructions involving fictive interaction: Their scope and functions in discourse .................. 475
   Emilia Krółak

Chapter 13. Evidential fictive interaction in Ungarinyin and Russian ......................................................................... 513
   Stef Spronck

Chapter 14. Recursive inflection and grammaticalised fictive interaction in the southwestern Amazon ........................ 565
   Hein van der Voort

Part V: Fictive interaction as communicative strategy

Chapter 15. ‘Say hello to this ad’: The persuasive rhetoric of fictive interaction in marketing ........................................ 607
   Line Brandt and Esther Pascual

Chapter 16. The use of interactive structures as a communicative strategy in Dutch and Portuguese aphasic speakers .......... 647
   Christine Versluis and Lou-Ann Kleppa

Chapter 17. Literal reported speech as fictive interaction strategy in conversations of Brazilian children with Autistic Spectrum Disorder ............................................................... 685
   Aline Bisotti Dornelas and Esther Pascual

About the contributors .................................................................................723

Author index ..............................................................................................729

Subject index ............................................................................................733

Language index ..........................................................................................737