

The Conversation Frame

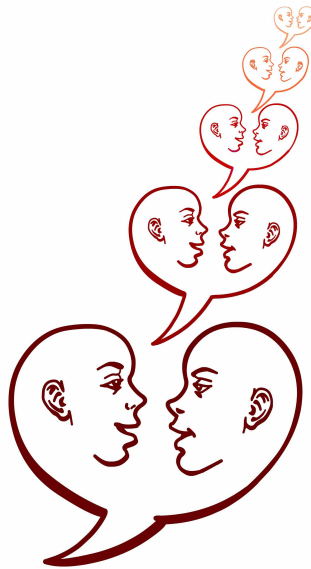

Forms and Functions of Fictive Interaction

Edited by

Esther Pascual

Sergeiy Sandler

[To appear in the Human Cognitive Processes series by John Benjamins]

‘Fictive Interaction’, © M. Holder

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgements

Part I: Introduction

Chapter 1. Fictive interaction and the conversation frame: An overview

Esther Pascual and Sergey Sandler

Chapter 2. Fictive interaction and the nature of linguistic meaning

Sergeiy Sandler

Part II: Fictive interaction as cognitive reality

Chapter 3. Generic integration templates for fictive communication

Cristóbal Pagán Cánovas and Mark Turner

Chapter 4. Real, imaginary, or fictive? Philosophical dialogues in an early Daoist text and its pictorial version

Mingjian Xiang

Chapter 5. Silent abstractions versus “Look at me” drawings: Corpus evidence that artworks’ subject matter affects their fictive speech

Karen Sullivan

Part III: Fictive interaction as discourse structure

Chapter 6. Persuading and arguing with the reader: Fictive interaction as discourse organizing device in witchcraft pamphlet prefaces (1566–1621)

Krisda Chaemsaithong

Chapter 7. Invocation or apostrophe?: Rhetorical dimensions of prayer idioms in broadcast television

William FitzGerald and Todd Oakley

Chapter 8. On discourse-motivated ‘sorries’: Fictive apologies in English, Hungarian, and Romanian

Gusztav Demeter

Part IV: Fictive interaction as linguistic construction

Chapter 9. What about? Fictive question-answer pairs for non-information-seeking functions across signed languages

Maria Josep Jarque

Chapter 10. Fictive questions in conditionals? Synchronic and diachronic evidence from German and English

Torsten Leuschner

Chapter 11. Intonation of fictive vs. actual reported speech in a Brazilian Portuguese oral corpus

Luiz Fernando Matos Rocha and Pablo Arantes

Chapter 12. Polish nominal constructions involving fictive interaction: Their scope and functions in discourse

Emilia Królak

Chapter 13. Evidential fictive interaction in Ungarinyin and Russian

Stef Spronck

Chapter 14. Recursive inflection and grammaticalised fictive interaction in the southwestern Amazon

Hein van der Voort

Part V: Fictive interaction as communicative strategy

Chapter 15. The use of interactive structures as a communicative strategy in Dutch and Portuguese aphasic speakers

Christine Versluis and Lou-Ann Kleppa

Chapter 16. ‘Say hello to this ad’: The persuasive rhetoric of fictive interaction in marketing

Line Brandt and Esther Pascual

Chapter 17. Literal reported speech as fictive interaction strategy in autistic conversation

Aline Dornelas and Esther Pascual

Author index

Subject index

Language index

Appendix 1: Sources for examples in Parts I and II